Pastor's
 Corner

Sunday April 20, 2008

Dear Parishioners, here's a thought from Fr. Ron Rolheiser, OMI in light of today's Gospel: "Jesus said: 'In my father's house there are many rooms!' Almost every year I attend a religious education congress in Anaheim, California. One little sub-theme there that I've always enjoyed is the placing of some of the book displays in the pavilion. Invariably you find, side by side, the booths for the Catholic Worker and Ignatius Press. They're miles apart ideologically (Michael Moore would shop at the former, Mel Gibson at the latter) yet here they are, in the same faith event, both representing something important in the same tradition, neither bent on excluding the other.

There's something important to be learned from this... We cannot build either a society or a Church with just liberals or just conservatives... Any community or Church built with just the like-minded is not worth belonging to because it reflects neither what's best inside the human spirit nor, for those of us who are Christians, the inclusive embrace of Christ... But that doesn't come naturally. What does come naturally is the proclivity to huddle together in fear and like-mindedness, like the disciples before Pentecost, barricaded behind a locked door with our own kind - paranoid, suspicious of all who are not of our own mind. Not that all of this is bad.

Sometimes we need nurturing and healing inside a more intentional community so hearts and nerves that have been frayed by division within family, community and Church have a chance to be more gently massaged and nurtured. Intentional community of this sort, in essence, is the "upper room" the early Church retired to, in pain and fear, as it waited for Pentecost.

But it didn't stay there forever. Indeed, no real community was formed in that room.

(Pastor's Corner continued...) They huddled together for awhile for a purpose, in fear, in loneliness, consoling each other within a certain fragility; but when they finally felt the real power of God's spirit, they burst out of those narrow confines. Their narrowness and fear gave way to an inclusivity and a courage which enabled them to speak different languages, languages of both the left and the right, languages of both the liberal and the conservative, languages that both Mel Gibson and Michael Moore could hear and take to heart." God bless, Fr. Mark.
